

Reply Memorandum & Responses to Appellees' Briefs

Significant Challenge

Nora's most valuable client for almost a decade is a leading Law Firm in Cincinnati, Ohio that handles a wide range of legal matters including medical malpractice claims. Recently, the firm submitted a project to draft responses to appellees' brief on a medical malpractice case with a week's deadline. Our experienced Senior Attorney took up the project and, to her dismay, understood that we had to prepare five different responses that included responses to the appellees' briefs filed by the physicians and healthcare providers along with two responses for a motion to dismiss and a motion for relief. As an extension of the deadline would be futile, the client asked us to prepare a single response to the appellees' briefs. We, however, found the local rule restriction for pages and dropped the client suggestion to do a single response to effectively address the arguments.

Team

Per a strategy, one legal associate was moved from her current work to assist in the matter. The team initially identified similar arguments in the three different appellees briefs. The Senior Attorney did the first response to one appellee's brief while the associate did the response to the motion to dismiss. By the time the Senior Attorney completed the first draft, the associate completed the response to the motion to dismiss. While the associate prepared similar responses to the appellees' briefs using the draft for identical arguments, the review of the response to the motion was done. After the associate completed these drafts, the Senior Associate reviewed the same and made additional rebuttal arguments to finalize. Meanwhile, the associate prepared the response to the motion for relief. Final QC was done as and when the first drafts were complete by the Lead Attorney who delivered all finished projects on time.
